GOVERNOR REFUSES TO LET MURDOCK LEAVE THE STATE

L. Murdock, now being held in Tucson and wanted in Los Angeles, is still one lap ahead of the California officers in his fight against extradition. Governor Hunt yesterday decided to hold up the matter for a few days pending the receipt of certain papers which Murdock claims will clear him. Murdock, it is alleged, rented an automobile in Los Angeles for $20 a week. He had the machine a week when it is claimed that both Murdock and the machine disappeared. He was later apprehended at Ajo, where the Arizona end of the story starts.

Upon Murdock being located in Ajo, Sheriff Forbes, of Pima county, was informed of the fact and handed a warrant to extradite him. For some reason or other Forbes did not want to arrest him, but after sufficient pressure had been brought to bear, he consented and apprehended the man.

Murdock's story is that he bought the machine and that he has a bill of sale for it. He claims that he is not the man who rented the machine, in spite of the fact that all identification marks of the man who did rent the machine, like with Murdock.

Holding that mere identification is not enough to allow a man to be taken from the state, the governor is holding up the matter. The California officers are rather incensed over the matter, claiming that if Murdock is innocent, as he claims, he would gladly go back and positively prove that he is not the man who rented the auto.

During the hearing before Governor Hunt yesterday morning, Sheriff Forbes called the governor, who evidently fearing to disclose some state secret over the phone, refused to talk with him at that time, but told him that he would call later.

One of the damaging pieces of evidence against Murdock is that he took out a California license in the name of "J. P. Brown." Murdock claims that his reason for this is that Brown was the man he purchased the machine of.

An attorney named Reddington, of Ajo, is fighting the case for Murdock, or Brown, and is apparently having an easy time of it. He has put up the plea that the alleged fugitive is a hard working man with a family to support and that as long as he is making good here, it would be wrong to take him from the state to face the consequences of a trial for stealing the machine.

The governor will wait for Murdock to produce his bill of sale before taking any definite action in the case.

PROCLAMATION FOR LABOR DAY ISSUED

Although there was a general intention among all classes of people to celebrate Monday as Labor Day, the official sanction was not put on the matter until yesterday. When Governor Hunt issued a proclamation declaring that Monday was and should be celebrated as "Labor Day."

The governor calls attention in his proclamation to the fact that this is a day of enlightened industrialism, which holds every citizen equal before the law.

Following is the proclamation in full:

"In keeping with the industrial spirit of the times and in accordance with a praiseworthy custom inaugurated in the United States some thirty-two years ago, whereby the first Monday in September is annually dedicated to the recognition of Labor in nearly all the states of the Union, I, Geo. W. P. Hunt, Governor of Arizona, by virtue of the trust in me reposed do hereby earnestly recommend that on Monday, September the fourth, nineteen hundred and sixteen, the people of Arizona, whatever their class or condition, shall desert from their everyday vocations for the purpose of paying fitting tribute to the dignity of honest toil and of rendering homage to an enlightened industrialism which holds every citizen equal before the law and accords just credit to the thousands of wage earners upon whose welfare the future of our country is in such great measure dependent."

DR. HARKER RETURNS—Dr. Ray S. Harker, pastor of the First Methodist church, returned from his vacation on the beaches yesterday. He will preach Sunday morning.
